Robins Air Force Base, Ga.

News you can use

Sunday movies begin Oct. 10

Robins' movie goers won't have to leave base to catch a good flick on Sundays this October.

The base movie theater will show movies each Sunday evening, beginning Oct. 10, in an ongoing effort to provide those with base identification cards quality entertainment possibilities at an affordable price.

Bill Milewski, restaurant operations manager charged with overseeing the theater through Army Air Force Exchange Services, said while Sunday movies drew low turnouts in the past, base leadership and the base movie theater staff are "taking two" with the month-long showings.

"With base demographics changing, the base commander approached us about offering more things on base for our Airmen to do," he said.

Mr. Milewski said if the trial run showings prove to be a hit, then Airmen and other Robins' employees may find themselves enjoying big screen flicks for less money every Sunday.

The theater will begin showing movies at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 10 and continue through Oct. 24.

Tickets for those with base identification cards and their guests are $ 3.50 for adults and $2 for children ages 11 and under.

For more information, call the Robins Base Movie Theater at 926-2919.

Jr. force study follow-up Oct. 8

Maj. Gen. Mike Collings, Center commander, will present two briefings Oct. 8 at the Base Theater to follow-up actions from the Junior Force Study conducted earlier this year. Attendance for select members of the junior force and their supervisors will be mandatory. The briefing for supervisors will begin at 1:15 p.m., and the briefing for the junior force is scheduled for 3 p.m. More details will be forthcoming.

Robins' leaders push importance of safe working environment

Maj. Gen. Mike Collings, Center commander, gives a safety briefing to the 78th Civil Engineer Group Wednesday outside Building 1555.

By Lanorris Askew
lanorris.askew@robins.af.mil

Center leadership has an important message for Team Robins. A message so imperative, two top ranking officials took hours out of their busy schedules to deliver it face-to-face.

Maj. Gen. Mike Collings and Brig. Gen. Chris Anzalone, Center commander and vice commander respectively, addressed the entire Robins work force through a series of safety briefings Wednesday.

Those briefings constituted one of the four hours mandated by Air Force Materiel Command in an effort to make AFMC a safer working environment. Organizations were given the latitude to accomplish the remaining three hours at any time during the week as long as it was completed by today.

What to know

The First Term Airmen's Center is a 78th Mission Support Squadron commander's program located on the top floor of the Smith Community Center. It has been active at Robins since 1999 and has processed more than 1,800 Airmen. All first term airmen must attend the program at the earliest possible date. Twenty-three classes are held each year.

4-week program readies new Airmen for mission

By Lanorris Askew
lanorris.askew@robins.af.mil

After Basic Military Training and technical school, but before a new Airman's first duty assignment, lies a four-week refresher course called the First Term Airman's Center or the FTAC.

As the name denotes, the four-week program is designed to help new Airmen transition from a training to a mission-oriented environment. It focuses on reinforcing military curriculum and other experiences of basic training and technical school.

The center provides a streamlined process for base and unit in-processing, as well as assistance in understanding how each individual fits into Team Robins and breaks its curriculum into two focus areas.

According to Tech. Sgt. Steven Bresson, FTAC flight chief, the first two weeks of the course involve classroom instruction including 53 briefings for new Airmen. Those include mandatory briefings on

Air Force Reserve Command selects new command chief

By 1st Lt. Lance Patterson
Air Force Reserve Command Public Affairs

Chief Master Sgt. Jackson A. Winsett will become Air Force Reserve Command's command chief master sergeant later this year, said AFRC officials Tuesday.

Lt. Gen. John A. Bradley, chief of Air Force Reserve and AFRC commander, selected Chief Winsett from among 20 nominees for the position.

Air Force reservists from all categories — traditional reservists, individual mobilization augmentees, air reserve technicians and Active Guard Reserve members — applied for the command's top enlisted position.

Chief Winsett has been the command chief for 10th Air Force at Naval Air Station Joint Reserve Base Fort Worth, Texas, since May 2000. He will be the fourth command chief that AFRC has had since its inception as a major command in 1997 and the 12th person to hold the job in the Air Force Reserve since March 1973. The position of AFRC command chief master sergeant is a 3-year controlled tour at Robins.

The duties involve communicating with the commander on problems, concerns, morale and attitudes of the enlisted force and, in turn, ensuring the commander's policies are known and understood by the enlisted force.

"My concern is for the enlisted force and the utilization of the force," said Chief Winsett. "I anticipate working hard for the next 36 months ensuring the needs of the enlisted corps are met."

Chief Winsett will succeed Chief Master Sgt. Cheryl D. Adams, who has served as the AFRC command chief master sergeant since February 2001. She was year-old pregnant woman in a life-threatening situation. He found her sitting on the ground rocking back and forth.

He then realized her arm was missing. The sergeant quickly used his uniform belt to form a tourniquet to stop the bleeding. Then he went to a nearby trailer for ice and a bag to protect the arm until emergency crews could arrive.

The mayor presented Senior Airman Joe Ciano and Senior Airman Charles Simpson, both members of the 116th Security Forces Squadron, with books commemorating 25 years of Warner Robins history and city lapel pins.

Airmen Ciano and Simpson were traveling home on a Sunday afternoon and came upon a mass casualty accident on Interstate 75. The two Airmen immediately offered their services to local law enforcement and emergency personnel. They spent five hours directing traffic and providing detour information to passing motorists.

Mayor Walker ended the presentation with a personal message to the Airmen, "The people of Warner Robins really respect what you do. You went above and beyond the call of duty. You didn't have to do it. You did it because you're great Americans."

PEOPLE

The message was simple, the safety of the most valued asset, the work force, must be put before all else.

"We collectively, particularly the leadership of the organizations (in the Center), have not put you as our top priority," General Collings told his audience. "Safety hasn't been the driving force here... production has."

The commander said putting production before safety has driven the Center into an environment that isn't conducive to longevity, and the culture born of that must change.

"People First, Mission Always," a slogan he admits he borrowed from Air Combat Command, will be the new battle cry for Team Robins on its journey toward safer working conditions.

"Your senior leaders have decided there's nothing more important at this Center than you, and there are going to be some changes," he said. "No longer do we walk by something in progress that is a risk to your safety or well being. Whether it's a traffic pattern on base, something in your workplace or electrical wires running that you've tripped on for the last six years, we all need to take an active position to help change this culture."

Speaking passionately, the commander said he is committed to making these changes, but these changes don't mean that productivity will be a thing of the past.

Although the order of priorities here is askew with production first, compliance with technical orders and directives second and safety a distant third, still everything done will be to deliver war winning combat capabilities to the war fighter.

In an effort to continue delivering those capabilities while making a safer work place, an approximately 300-person Risk Reduction Team is scheduled to arrive this month, and stay for 90 to 120 days to help evaluate Robins and help put safety first.

"They will help us to have a culture that adopts adherence to strict technical orders and directives," he said. "The team will not be inspecting but integrating."

When problems are identified there will be a team dedicated to remedying them.

"It's going to be tough to do, but we need each and every one of you."

Lamenting past safety incidents, the commander said he never wants to have to look a family in the eye and tell them that a loved one has died because someone did not follow standard Air Force operating procedures.

Lt. Col. Dan Mokris said this was not the first time Robins has held a safety day, but it was the first time the Center commander got out into the work force and talked strictly safety.

"The last safety day was several years ago at the start of the 101 Critical Days period and focused greatly on off-duty safety and summer leisure activities. Center leaders agreed last week to hold future safety days twice a year, once in April and again in September.

"It's important for everyone to realize the importance of their own safety, and their personal responsibility in ensuring that their work area is safe - that they are accomplishing their job in the safest possible manner," said Colonel Mokris.

The colonel said this is just the beginning of a long-term effort to change the culture at Robins from one that says, "I've always done it that way, and I don't think I need to change" to one that says "I'm doing it the right way - regardless of how I've done it in the past - because the right way is the safest way."

the first African-American woman to hold the title of command chief on active duty for a major command. Chief Adams is being considered for a position within the Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Manpower and Reserve Affairs. If selected she will report for duty in the Pentagon as early as Dec. 1.

Chief Winsett entered the Air Force

Reserve in 1981 after serving initially on active duty in the U.S. Army from 1966 to 1969 with tours in Berlin, Germany, and in the Republic of Vietnam.

His duties in the Air Force Reserve included assignments as an administrative specialist, military personnel flight specialist, group career advisor, first-sergeant and command chief master sergeant. He served as the senior enlisted advisor for the 442nd Fighter Wing at Whiteman Air Force Base, Mo., before becoming the command chief for 10th Air Force.

In his civilian career, Chief Winsett worked for the Federal Deposit Insurance Co. and owned a consulting firm. He retired from both occupations, devoting the last three years to full-time service in the Air Force Reserve.

Chief Winsett has lived in Lexana, Kan., since 1989 where he has been a traditional reservist. He is married and the father of one daughter and two sons.

Chief Winsett holds a bachelor of arts degree in psychology and business and a master of arts degree in business and counseling.

drug and alcohol, suicide and military equal opportunity as well as briefings from the 78th Air Base Wing commander, 78th Mission Support Group commander, Center command chief, and the First Sergeant's Council.

If an Airman has a family and the briefing may impact them, the family members are invited to attend.

"During those first two weeks, we also get them processed into the base, take them to the VA hospital as a community service tour and take them on the base services tour," he said. "In the second two weeks we actually release them back to their unit and they do base detail like ceremonies, luncheons and retirements."

The sergeant, who is the only full-time worker at the FTAC, is an 18-year Air Force veteran and said things have changed tremendously since he joined.

"It took us three months to get all the briefings they get in two weeks," he said. "The FTAC is a definite plus. It helps the new Airmen make a smooth transition into the active duty environment. They are just like us now, and we have to teach them how to make that transition from civilian to military."

Team leaders, selected on a volunteer basis from various squadrons around base, are assigned to a 60-day rotation and help instill the Air Force core values into the new Airmen. They facilitate the day-to-day operation of the center and maintain accountability of the students and their progress.

Sergeant Bresson said during each class, a class leader is appointed to assist the team leaders. That person is chosen from among the new Airman.

Airman 1st Class Nathan Miller, assigned to the 51st Combat Communications Squadron, recently received the honor.

"I think the FTAC is giving me a better understanding of how the base works and how to get around and get me into a rhythm where I will be more comfortable with the base itself and how it operates," he said.

The Jasper, Ind., native said he joined the military because he wanted to serve his country and see the world while he's still young.

To close out the program, a graduation ceremony is held on the last Friday of the class where the Airmen meet their supervisor and receive a certificate and letter of completion.

According to Sergeant Bresson, the FTAC will soon have a new home. Construction is complete on their new building next to the Airman Leadership School.

CFC kicks off season of giving

By Lanorris Askew
lanorris.askew@robins.af.mil

What to know

The Robins CFC Office is located in Building 708 across from the hospital and can be reached at 327-8150.

For more information on the Middle Georgia CFC visit www.middlegacfc.com/money.htm or the Office of Personnel Management CFC Web site at www.opm.gov/cfc.

The Robins 2004-2005 Combined Federal Campaign ushers in the season for giving with its kickoff celebration today at the Museum of Aviations’ VistaScope Theater. The kickoff ceremony will take place at 9 a.m.

This year’s campaign will run from Wednesday to Nov. 17 across Air Force Materiel Command as directed by Gen. Gregory S. Martin, AFMC commander.

Last year, federal workers reached into their pockets to donate nearly $250 million during the campaign.

The Middle Georgia Area CFC contributed more than $1.3 million.

The CFC began in 1961 as a way to consolidate informal charity solicitations into one, federally organized charity drive. Since that time, millions of dollars have been raised to help local, state, national and international charities.

The campaign is the largest workplace charity campaign in the country, according to officials at the Air Force Personnel Center Randolph Air Force Base, Texas. This annual fall fund-raising drive allows nearly 4 million federal employees to contribute to thousands of local and national non-profit organizations.

On average, one in four federal employees or their family members will benefit from the CFC charities this year alone, according to officials.

Donors may designate which charity, or charities, receives their money by filling out a pledge card. Contributions can be in cash, check or by payroll deduction.

The Middle Georgia campaign covers a 10-county area, which stretches as far north as Baldwin County and as far south as Dodge County. The chairperson for this year’s campaign is Lt. Col. Bryan Hudson.

IMA helps C-5 production branch save money

By 1st Lt. Lance Patterson
Air Force Reserve Command
Public Affairs

Chief Master Sgt. Louise Wilson, Lean project coordinator for the Center’s C-5 Production Branch, leads by example.

Since being named Air Force Materiel Command’s outstanding senior enlisted individual mobilization augmentee of the year in 1999, Chief Wilson has indeed made her mark.

“Team Robins has given me the responsibility, accountability and authority to get the job done,” said Chief Wilson. “The Lean project is designed to find innovative ways to save the Air Force money, and these results can be seen every day. In 2004 our Lean team helped save the Air Force $68,000.”

Born in Macon, Chief Wilson enlisted in the Air Force Reserve and joined the Reserve’s 402nd Combat Logistics Support Squadron (now 622nd CLSS) in December 1978. In 1991 she joined the IMA program and has been on active duty since 1995.

“I love interacting with people; I consider myself a people person,” said Chief Wilson. “The involvement with the Lean projects allows me to interact with all areas and at all levels of the C-5 program.”

Chief Wilson is one of more than 12,000 individual mobilization augmentees who serve part-time in active duty units. Known as “Citizen Airmen,” these reservists are assigned to every major command and usually backfill their active duty counterparts but often deploy to support worldwide missions.

“IMAs here at Robins have been well received,” said Chief Wilson. “The support and cooperation has been excellent from everyone here. I’m a part of an amazing team of active-duty people, reservists and civilians who make my job as Lean project coordinator phenomenal.”

After spending the last 24 years in the Air Force, Chief Wilson says her inevitable retirement looms in the next couple of years.

“In the future I look forward to spending more quality time traveling with my husband, five children and eight grandchildren,” she said.

But for now Chief Wilson is content with her job, working with a team of people who value integrity, service before self and excellence in all they do to accomplish the Air Force mission.

“I have worked with Chief Wilson since April 2001, and it has been a pleasure to work with her the entire time,” said Dede Stone, process improvement section chief for Warner Robins Air Logistics Center’s C-5 Production Branch. “Chief Wilson takes pride in the work that she does and she never fails to be proactive in her job assignments. She is truly a professional in every sense of the word.”

“The IMAs were initially assigned to support C-5 Lean efforts,” said Mrs. Stone. “The IMA team has been recognized for their efforts to support Lean and they continue to provide much needed support for process improvement.”

Chief Wilson’s military awards include basic training honor graduate, marksmanship, National Defense Service and Meritorious Service Medals.

The Air Force Reserve retains experienced professionals. Ninety-three percent of the aircrews and 86 percent of the support troops are prior service, averaging more than 12 years of experience.

People first...safety matters | ‘MacGyver’ does not work here

By Brig. Gen. Chris Anzalone

In the TV show “MacGyver,” Richard Dean Anderson became famous for using his ingenuity, courage and skill to get out of bad situations with whatever resources he had on hand. This guy could break out of prison with little more than a paper clip and a candy bar.

Every week, he’d solve the problem, complete his mission, and miraculously show up in the final scene without a scratch.

That only works in the movies.

Unfortunately, I have observed too many people at Robins attempting to use the “MacGyver” technique; trying to get their jobs done through quick fixes and risk-taking. They’ve been getting work out the door, but they’ve often done so by increasing the risk to their co-workers and the mission.

You know who you are. You’re the one standing on the top of the step ladder where the red letters clearly indicate “NOT A STEP.”

You’re the one speeding back from lunch, through the pedestrian crosswalks, talking on the cell phone with one hand and eating lunch with the other.

Or maybe you’re the supervisor who looks the other way rather than enforcing safety in the workplace.

All of us need to take a step backward and think safety. Everyone is a precious part of a winning team.

We need to stop taking unnecessary risks in the name of “getting the job done.”

We can’t deliver war winning capabilities on time and on cost when our people are injured. We can’t maintain our support for the war on terrorism over the long haul if we take risks that are sure to impact our work force.

When we ignore safety, we are accepting unnecessary “casualties of peace.”

In one two week pay period ending Sept. 4, the Center lost 346 man-days to on-the-job injuries. That’s about 35 employees’ worth of productivity lost from the war effort if you figure we get 10 work-days per employee per pay period. That was a good pay period. A bad pay period was the one ending July 12, 2003, when we had 520 lost days.

While we’ve been slowly bringing down our average lost days by fixing hazards that we see, the fact remains that we can’t see every hazard. You can. If you see something that is unsafe, report it. Then, follow up to see if anyone is doing something about it. We can’t keep thinking that we’re too busy to be safe.

Safety is everyone’s responsibility. “MacGyver-ism” doesn’t work at the Warner Robins Air Logistics Center or at Robins Air Force Base.

If people are first, safety does matter.

Making a proactive cultural change at Robins

Sexual assault is an issue of grave concern for base leadership, but many of you may not know what it actually is.

Let’s be clear – sexual assault is not sexual harassment. Sexual assault is any sexual activity that’s against another person’s will. It involves unwarranted physical touching of any kind, and it’s a crime.

Sexual assault is intolerable and creates a hostile and unproductive work environment. The base community has worked diligently to deter incidence of sexual assault and provide a supportive environment for its victims, but it takes time to make a cultural change.

Prior to the release of the “Report Concerning the Assessment of USAF Sexual Assault Prevention and Response” in August, Robins had already jumped at the opportunity to train five victim support liaisons whose sole purpose is to assist any victim of sexual assault – that includes civilian employees, contractors, military members and military dependants.

If you are a victim of sexual assault, immediately report the crime to the 78th Security Forces Squadron’s law enforcement desk at 926-2187. From the moment you report the crime, you are entitled to a victim support liaison.

If you’re a civilian employee, you may also seek help through the Employee Assistance Program. You can reach them locally at 327-7683 or you may call 1-800-222-0364 for help anytime day or night; 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

If you’re a military member or dependant you may seek help through the Life Skills Center. Call the command post to reach the on-call point of contact for Life Skills at 327-2612.

If none of those options appeal to you, please call the command post to speak with the on-call chaplain who can also provide assistance.

While Robins Air Force Base is proactively initiating a change in culture, it’s everyone’s responsibility to affect change.

We are People First, Mission Always, and that means sexual assault will not be tolerated by a victim, a bystander, a supervisor or any member of our community.

Robins Air Force Base is becoming the Air Force model for victim support. As a team, we can truly make a difference – People First, Mission Always!

Promotion opportunities

A person who works on the flight line or back shops can qualify for an Equipment Specialist (ES) position with an opportunity to get promoted into ES field. But when they achieve an ES at the supervisory level (GS-12), they can’t qualify for a higher position (GS-13) in a career field in the maintenance area. What is the reason for this? I would think that the qualifications should be a two-way street, particularly since an ES supervisor has gained additional experience and become more knowledgeable in areas dealing with aircraft issues and with dealing with personnel. It seems there is a glass ceiling for ES’s at the GS-12 level at this base. What can you do to break this ceiling?

Commander’s reply: There is no intended artificial barrier or glass ceiling for these positions or any others. It’s difficult to provide a descriptive answer due to the generic nature of your inquiry and lack of specifics. Positions are filled in accordance with qualification standards established by the Office of Personnel Management and other regulatory compliance. Merit promotion procedures require specialized, or qualifying, experience for each position. Length and grade level of experience are used in all qualifications determinations. Equipment Specialist experience is qualifying for some GS-13 maintenance positions such as industrial production manager, GS-1601. However, these positions and most other GS-13 positions are managed by a designated career program at the Air Force Personnel Center in San Antonio, Texas. Qualifications determinations for these positions would likewise be made by the appropriate career program.

You are encouraged to contact the Career Counseling Office at 926-3805 extension 341 and make an appointment to discuss your career goals and opportunities for advancement.

Remember to slow down

Airmen Against Drunk Drivers is a 24-hour-service that provides rides to those who have consumed alcohol and need transportation home. The program is run by volunteers from across base, and those who use the service aren’t subject to adverse action.

Area Defense Council dispenses free legal advice to military members

By Holly J. Logan
holly.logan@robins.af.mil

If you’re military and you find yourself in legal limbo, the Area Defense Council here can help get your life back in balance.

The ADC, whose headquarters are located at Bolling Air Force Base, Washington D.C., provides legal counsel and representation to active duty military and activated reservists who are facing action under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Capt. Darren Johnson, ADC attorney here, said if Airmen find themselves in a legally questionable situation on the job, they shouldn’t hesitate to call his office.

“A lot of people don’t know they have this independent council,” he said. “What makes this service so great is that we’re completely confidential and free of charge for military members. Since we’re not attached to this base particularly, our interest is our clients.”

The captain said it’s important that every military member knows his or her right to legal counsel.

“If they’re suspected of some type of misconduct (under UCMJ), we can provide them with advice,” he said. “That’s really our bread and butter. We provide general, legal advice. Anybody in the military who is suspected of misconduct can come here, and it’s all confidential.”

The ADC is limited to legal matters of the UCMJ, such as court martial, reports of survey and letters of reprimand.

Those in need of the ADC’s services should contact the office for pre-screening of their situation, followed by scheduling an appointment.

Tech. Sgt. Lisa Sanders, defense paralegal, said if a question of an action’s legality ever crosses an Airman’s mind, he or she should call the experts.

“If you’re military and you think you may be getting into some kind of trouble, you may want to come to the ADC and let us know what’s going on,” she said.

Spending time at the WALL

F-15 Wing Shop supervisors, from left, David McNeal, Frank Valasky, Larry Brooks and David Turner gather to discuss the progress on the board each morning in Building 140. The board shows the status of the aircraft each wing belongs to in its programmed depot maintenance process.

Real-time production board keeps wing shop employees ‘in the know’

George Pierce, wing section deputy chief in the Commodities and Industrial Products Division of the Maintenance Directorate, said mechanics and supervisors alike spend time at “the wall.”

That’s because they can find the answers about everything from the percentage of work completed on any wing to the status of parts required to complete a job on a real-time production board hanging in Building 140.

The board can show the status of the aircraft each wing belongs to in its programmed depot maintenance process which is completed by the F-15 Production Branch in Building 83.

Mr. Pierce said the process to build and use the production control boards began about a year and a half ago.

“We realized we needed some type of visual management system out there,” he said. “It’s like a blue print of the entire shop. It shows all of our cell locations. It shows each wing and where it’s located. It has the due date, our internal completion date for that wing – which always meets or exceeds our customer need date. It shows the tail number that the wing goes back to.

“It’s a live picture of the shop and, as the wings move from cell to cell, we manually move the wing on the production control boards.”

“It’s a live picture of the shop and, as the wings move from cell to cell, we manually move the wing on the production control boards,” Mr. Pierce said.

Deciding they would like to expand the display, they worked with Patricia Powell, David Smith and Heather Langston, three employees of Robbins-Gioia, to develop a system that would provide real-time tracking of customer-driven measurements.

Those measurements include the F-15 wing schedule, on-time deliveries, cell-to-cell performance and flow days by component group.

Internal measurements tracked by the system include work-in-process levels, quality reports and a production-delay database.

A recent addition to the control board is called the work leaders’ tool box, and was developed by Eric Smith, the retail item manager for the shop.

Mr. Smith works in the Maintenance Materiel Support Division.

Work leaders can make good decisions by accessing information in the work leaders’ tool box when a part isn’t readily available.

“All of our work leaders can go to that real-time production board, click on that tool box, plug in a part number and it will show them the current status (of that part),” Mr. Pierce said. “That’s very important for them, especially on the weekends and night shift.

“If they have some damage to the wing, they have to make a decision if there is a part available or if they need to design a repair,” he added. “Now, instead of waiting until the next day or calling someone, they have instant access to that data.”

If a work leader checks the status of a part and finds they’re out of stock, he can check to see if the part has already been ordered, and if so, when it should be delivered.

All the programs in the real-time production board manage to keep supervisors and mechanics updated on the status of the work being produced in the shop.

“Since June 2003 the F-15 wing shop has produced more than 280 PDM wings. Ninety-four percent of those wings were produced and delivered to the customer ahead of schedule, and the other 6 percent were produced and delivered on schedule. No wings were delivered late,” Mr. Pierce said.

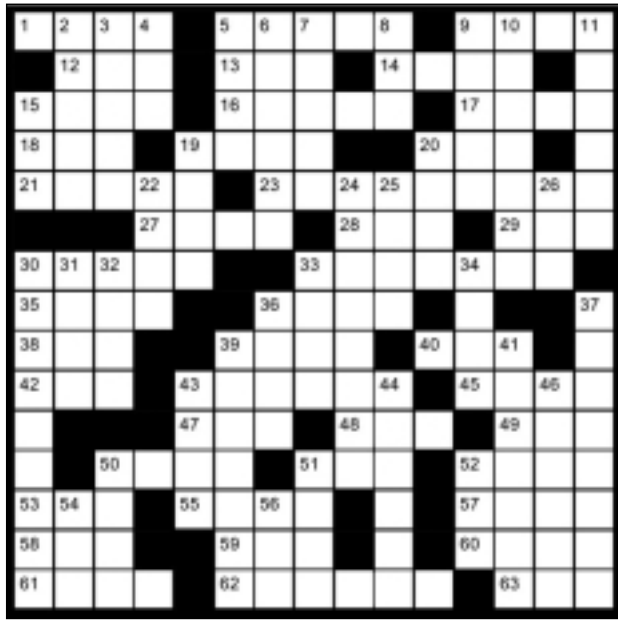

So, when it comes to making sure a wing meets schedule, everyone spends time at the wall.

Steve Joiner works on a Jo-bolt on an F-15 wing. He can find the answers about everything from the percentage of work completed on any wing to the status of parts required to complete a job on a real-time production board hanging in Building 140.

FAMILY SUPPORT CENTER

Family Support Center sponsored classes, workshops, and seminars are open to all Team Robins personnel. For more information, or to make a reservation, call 926-1256.

Transition assistance

Transition Assistance has a four-step process for ensuring active duty personnel are prepared to separate from the military. The process begins with

- attending a pre-TAP information class 18 to 36 months prior to separation;
- attending a resume and writing class around the 10th month;
- attending the three-day

Department of Labor workshop at the sixth month; and

- attending interviewing process class at the fifth month.

These classes are offered throughout the year. Personnel approaching separation should schedule pre-separation and Individual Transition Plan counseling appointments with a TAP representative.

Relocation assistance

Relocation Assistance at the FSC has videos on many Air Force installations around the world available for checkout. RAP also has a Standard Installation Topic Exchange Service that has information on all military installations worldwide. This informational site is for all personnel: www.airforcesourceone.com; user ID: airforce; password: ready.

If you don't have a computer you can call (800) 707-5784, and for conversation en Espanol, llame al (800) 375-5971. For additional information, contact Relocation Assistance at 926-3453.

Pre-deployment briefings

Pre-Deployment Briefings are offered by the FSC readiness team at 8:30 a.m. Mondays and Fridays in Building 945, FSC annex. For more information, call 926-3453.

SERVICES BRIEFS

Aero Club

The Aero Club open house will be Saturday from 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. Points of interest will include watching aviation movies, browsing through surplus aviation items and free time on the simulator. Dennis Peterson, club manager, will grill hamburgers and hot dogs for guests. Discovery flights will be available and guests can enter a drawing for a discovery flight gift certificate.

Base Library

The library is offering information at your fingertips. This complimentary service is available for all active duty, retired and reserve military and their family members and DoD civilians. The InfoTrakOneFile-periodical full text, Health and Wellness Resource Center and the Student Resource Center Bronze will provide information when needed. From your Robins office go to <http://infotrac.galegroup.com/itweb/robi82597> or from your home enter the same URL plus the password "offbase". For more information, call 327-7380 or visit the Base Library, Building 905.

Club Membership

A squadron challenge is underway, in conjunction with the "Get In On It" club drive now through Nov. 30. The challenge is divided into three categories: a party valued at $1,000 for large units consisting of 100 or more people; a party valued at $600 for medium units consisting of 50 - 99 people and a $300 party for small units consisting of 49 or less people. Club members who recruit new members will receive $5 in club bucks for each new member they gain. There is no limit on the number of club bucks a current member can earn during the club drive. Club membership is available to all active duty, retired and reserve military, DoD and NAF civilians. Membership dues for the Enlisted Club are $8 per month for E-4 - E-9 and $4 per month for E-1 - E-4. Officers' Club dues are $18 per month. For complete details, visit the Services Web site at www.robins.af.mil or call the Officers' Club at 926-2670 or the Enlisted Club at 926-4515.

Fire safety important at work, home

Center Safety Office

Fire safety is important on base and off base, at work and at home.

To promote fire safety, conduct a self-inspection of your home and work environment today. A facility manager’s checklist is available in the Robins AFB Instruction RAFBI 32-2001, The Fire Protection Operations and Fire Prevention Program.

The checklist will guide you as you walk through your work area. The checklist can also be used by housing occupants to help ensure their homes are fire safe.

By making a self-inspection, using the facility manager’s checklist and using good sound fire prevention measures, a safer home and work environment can be accomplished.

Here are a few fire prevention safety tips:

- Be familiar with the facility fire extinguishers.
- Attics and concealed spaces must be kept clean at all times. No storage of any type is permitted in these areas (except military family housing).
- Dispose of rubbish materials in properly identified non-combustible bins or receptacles.
- Keep all work areas reasonably free of the accumulation of combustible materials.
- Storage is prohibited in mechanical, electrical and boiler rooms.
- Remove all vegetation from under and around all buildings.
- Store paints, flammables and chemicals in their original containers and keep away from any heat, sparks or flames.
- Know the fire reporting number 911 or in some Robins facilities 9-911.
- Never smoke around flammables and never smoke in bed.
- Make sure extension cords are UL Listed or Factory Mutual Approved.

If you have any further questions, contact the fire prevention branch at 926-2145.

AF wins 2004 Armed Forces Golf Championship

Air Force Print News

SAN ANTONIO – The Air Force golf team won the 2004 Armed Forces Golf Championship at Fort Carson, Colo., Sept. 21 to 25.

The host Army team jumped to a three-stroke lead over the Air Force (731-734) after the first day of play. Team’s scores are determined by adding the 18-hole stroke total of the six men and three women on the team.

Brian Billingsley, from Robins Air Force Base, kept the Air Force competitive with his 1-under-par 71, tying Mark Johnson of the Army for the best score of the day.

Tammy Garcia, from Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, led all women golfers on opening day with her round of 84.

Jeff Scohy, also from Wright-Patterson AFB, shot the best round on the second day of play – a 5-under-par 67. Matthew Peterson, from Offutt AFB, Neb., had a 3-under-par 69, while Billingsley and Arnell Garza, from Fairchild AFB, Wash., came in at 70.

The Air Force also had the top three women’s scores of the day with Karin Tjelmeland, from Lajes Field, Azores, with 78 to lead the group.

Garcia and Amy Rongey, from Osan Air Base, South Korea, both shot 81. The combined scores of the Air Force Team beat the Army’s total by 21 strokes, giving the Air Force an 18-stroke lead over the Army after the second day of play.

Scohy’s 69 once again led the Air Force team on Day 3, followed closely by 72 from Billingsley, Garza and Barry Cousler, from Offutt AFB. James Logan Gage, from Patrick AFB, Fla., was not far behind with a score of 73. Rongey’s 86 led the women on Day 3. These scores contributed to the Air Force’s overall 41-stroke lead going into the final day of play.

Peterson’s 70 led the Air Force on the final day of competition. Scohy, Cousler and Garza all shot 72, while Billingsley ended the tournament with a 73. Rongey led the women with an 84. The Air Force claimed the team title with a 2,793-stroke total, followed by the Army (2,842), the Navy (3,000), and the Marine Corps (3,096).

Scohy topped all competitors with his four-day total of 283, followed closely by Billingsley’s 286. This earned them gold and silver medals for the championship.
